Aims and Scope
The European Review of Agricultural Economics (ERAE) serves as a forum for innovative theoretical and applied agricultural economics research. The ERAE strives for balanced coverage of economic issues within the broad subject matter of agricultural and food production, consumption and trade, rural development, and resource use and conservation. Topics of specific interest include multiple roles of agriculture; trade and development; industrial organisation of the food sector; institutional dynamics; consumer behaviour; sustainable resource use; bioenergy, agricultural, agri-environmental and rural policy; specific European issues. Methodological articles are welcome. All published papers are at least double peer reviewed and must show originality and innovation. The ERAE also publishes book reviews.

The European Review of Agricultural Economics is the official journal of the European Association of Agricultural Economists. To become a member of this association, contact: P.O. Box 29703, 2502 LS The Hague, The Netherlands. Further information can be found at www.eaae.org.
